Pair unhappy with county's 'return to gravel' policy

By Steve Marschke

There's just not enough money to maintain all the county's paved roads as paved roads, says Yolo County Supervisor Tom Stallard.

"Yolo County spends about $3.5 million per year on its roads, which is about half of what it should be," said the first-term supervisor, whose district includes a stretch of land from Woodland to West Sacramento's northwestern corner (the "Bryte" neighborhood).

"Our road program is in a state of 'triage,' " he added, referring to the medical practice of rationing emergency care to those who need it and can benefit from it the most.

For Tim and Sandra O'Neill, who live on County Road 126 just north of West Sacramento and near the Sacramento River, this policy means the road to their home is now -- they feel -- unacceptably dangerous. After county officials removed the paving from a couple miles of the road, they have told the O'Neills they won't replace it. The result is puddles and ruts in the road, and no visible shoulder -- making it easy for drivers to drive off the raised levee road in the fog.

"They were planning to resurface it but they found out they didn't have enough money," said Sandra O'Neill. "They come by and grade it when we call and complain."

"But the same ruts and holes re-appear every time," added her husband, Tim.

Apparently in response to their complaints to Stallard, county public works employees have added a series of reflective posts to the sides of the road to help keep cars on the right path in the dark or in bad weather. Those posts appeared to be spaced about 50 or 75 yards apart, which the O'Neills felt was too far apart.

Stallard said he had suggested the reflectors to the county public works department, and when informed that they had been installed, but might be too far apart, said he would check into getting more reflectors put up.

But he said the main problem is that the county doesn't have enough money to maintain paved roads everywhere, so it has a "return to pavement" policy for underused stretches.

He said four families use Road 126. The O'Neills said there were six.

But the seriousness of the Road 126 situation doesn't compare with the seriousness of having, for example, a mile of Rd. 14 currently unpaved and heavily trafficked near Esparto and Highway 505.

"Our resources and allocations are driven by necessity," said Stallard. "I don't like defending the situation, but it is a matter of dollars and sense. Partly the reason that (Road 126) doesn't get more attention is because it's not heavily used."

"Rather than repair some of the more remote and underused roads, the policy is to grind it up and return it to gravel on the theory that a gravel road is safer than a poorly maintained paved road."

But, as the O'Neills have noticed, you can't paint a stripe down the middle of a gravel road to keep people from driving off the side in bad weather.

Access problems for Gainsborough despite financing

■ Residential development may end up depending on Jefferson Blvd. after all

By Steve Marschke

The Southport Industrial Park may not immediately build a road to connect the planned new Palamidessi Bridge with the planned "Gainsborough" residential subdivision to its south, meaning the residential subdivision is now looking at planning for its access by way of Marshall Road and Jefferson Blvd.

The lack of access to the planned new bridge "puts Gainsborough between a rock and a hard place," said city planning director Steve Patek, and the access issue will go before the city planning commission on April 18.

But Patek stressed that dif-

Review:

'The Nerd' proves comical & energetic

■ If you haven't yet tried an RCHS evening at the theater, check out 'The Nerd,' playing through Saturday

By Carrie Fisher

River City High School's highly regarded drama department, in cooperation with Thespian Troupe 3129 and under the able direction of Roy S. Engoron, has done it again!

This year's treat is Larry Shue's The Nerd, a contemporary comedy about three friends whose unexpected visit from an eccentric character out of the past changes the direction of their lives.

Each of the actors is well-cast, with Tony Vendetti competently portraying a leading role as Willum Cubbert, a modern-day architect; Patricia Huckabay giving a natural performance as Tansy McGinnis, his close friend; and Brian Kinney, convincing in his role as Axel Hammond, a drama critic and their long-time confidant.

Exceptionally funny in the challenging title role as "the nerd," Moses Cushing immediately captures the audience's attention with a performance that reveals both his outstanding acting ability and talent for comic timing.

Supporting roles are equally impressive. Christian Tillmann's delivery is flawless; Sarah Templin remains precisely in character throughout her entire performance; and, energetically depicting a rambunctious youngster, Scott Hampton deserves special commendation as well.

Particularly note-worthy is the attention given to every detail of the set, including technical effects, lighting and costumes.

The hard-work and dedication of both the cast and crew of this production really shines. If you haven't seen "The Nerd" yet, there's still time; it will run again on Thursday, Friday (Arts Boosters Gala night), and Saturday of this week at the Ezer K. Matthews Memorial Performing Arts Center at Yolo High School, 920 West Acres Road, West Sacramento. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m. Tickets can be purchased in advance by calling 371-0700, and are also available at the door.

Planners give thumbs-up to Cheaper store

City Council called on for final decision on Southport gas station/market

By Steve Marschke

The West Sacramento Planning Commission voted 6-0 to accept the conclusions of a "Cheaper" store traffic study and recommend that the city council approve the store at its planned Southport location.

"I think the commission felt we really couldn't find any reason not to substantiate the traffic studies they've done," said its vice chairman, Jeff Henry.

The study commissioned by the company showed that the 8,000 square foot discount grocery store and gas station, planned for Linden Road's southern intersection with Jefferson Blvd., would not increase traffic on Jefferson Blvd.

The matter will go to the city council, which last year had reversed a similar planning commission decision which had been based on a different traffic study.

Three supporters spoke in favor of the store at Thursday's meeting, and one spoke against it.

Second suspect arrested

By Steve Marschke

A second suspect is now in custody for the Jan. 4 drive-by shooting death of 16-year old Robert Castro of West Sacramento.

Two 16-year old West Sacramento boys, whose names have not been released because of their age, are still being sought in connection with the killing.

One adult suspect was already in jail in Sacramento on unrelated burglary charges.

But on March 7, West Sacramento Police arrested Daniel Demetrius Robinson, 21, at his home in Sacramento.

28-year old Alonzo James Joseph of Sacramento is the suspect already in custody in Sacramento on burglary charges, but is expected to be transferred to Yolo County to face murder charges.

Detective Terrell Marshall of the West Sacramento Police Department said his department has some information on the whereabouts of one of the at-large juvenile suspects.

A weapon recovered during the investigation remains in the possession of the state's Department of Justice crime lab pending tests to see if it is the same .22 caliber revolver used to kill Castro.

Sacramento man found dead

Reclamation district officials discovered the body of a man on March 6 near the west end of the Yolo Bypass.

The fully clothed body bore no signs of obvious foul play, and toxicology tests are expected to be completed within a few weeks.

The man is identified as Raymond Tafoya, 41, a Sacramento resident.

Anyone with possible information is asked to call the Yolo County Coroner's Office at 668-5292.

Local facility seeks old photos, film

The inland Port of Sacramento is producing a videotape of its early history for community use and archives. The Port opened in 1963 and is looking for film or still pictures taken prior to 1970.

The prints or film (color or black and white) could be anything relevant to the Port,

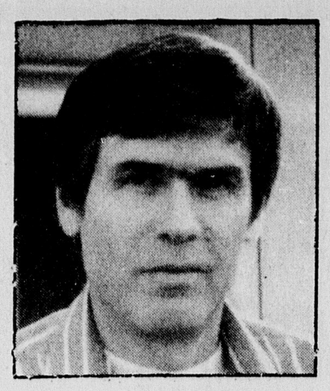
You've got to be kidding -- now she gets a new car?

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

As I mentioned in my last column, my 21-year-old daughter recently managed to plow her cute little Ford Escort into the rear end of a parked car. Thankfully, no one was injured, but her vehicle was totaled and she was left without a way to get to school or work.

Before the ink had even dried on her insurance settlement she had the following suggestion: "Dad, why don't I take the money they gave me for the Escort and use it as a down payment on a brand new car?"

"What?" screamed my 18-year-old son, Ty, who is presently driving a truly ugly four door 1987 Chrysler LeBaron that all his friends make jokes about -- not to mention he can barely get it to start in the mornings. "Let me get this straight," continued Ty in disbelief, "Carrie goes out and crashes into some poor guy sitting in a parked car with his emergency flashers on and her punishment is now she gets to have a new car?"

"But if I buy a used one," said Carrie in her defense, "I won't have a warranty on it or anything. Who's going to fix it if something breaks -- Dad?"

"Good point," said her brother Paul with a big smile.

"Look," said Ty to his sister, "just because Dad doesn't even know how to change the oil in a car doesn't mean you should get rewarded for totaling the Escort."

"But if I can make the payments," said Carrie, "then I should be able to buy any car I want, huh, Dad?"

"But Dad," said Ty, "what kind of lesson is that to be teaching her?"

"If you ask me," interjected Paul with another smile, "I think you ought to make her walk to school and work for awhile -- at least until she takes driver's education all over again."

As my kids continued to argue, all I could think about was that one way or the other, Carrie needed a car to drive, and I was going to have to spend most of my weekend interacting with what I consider to be one of God's most creative curses on modern man -- car salesmen.

"I believe in being completely honest with all my customers," said the first one, struggling to keep his toupee from being blown off by the wind; "See this," said the second one, crashing his fist into the passenger door of a brand new Saturn, "this car is really put together."; "Now I don't want you to worry about that sticker price," said the third. "Just make me an offer -- and I don't care how ridiculous it is."

And so it went until Carrie finally said, "I kinda like this one," at the 9th or 10th dealership we visited last Saturday.

"What is it?" I asked, noticing that it was fully loaded and therefore probably out of my daughter's price range.

"It's a Hyundai Scoop," she said, pointing out the lettering on the trunk of the car.

"What the hell is a Hyundai Scoop?" I asked her.

"It just happens to be one of our best selling imports," said a voice that startled us both.

"Really?" I said as yet another car salesman reached out to shake my hand.

"Now what do you think we're selling that little beauty for tonight?" he asked me. Before I could answer, he added, "We're going to close up pretty quick, so I'm willing to sell it to you for just about any price you name. It's only a year old, and it doesn't even have 20,000 miles on it."

And then it began -- the dickering. If I remember right, it started out somewhere around $13,000 and without hardly any effort on my part, it was suddenly down below $12,000, and then $11,000. "You're really doing good, Dad," my daughter whispered to me. "But remember, Greg (my brother) says that if they aren't about ready to throw you out of the place, then you haven't got them down far enough yet."

"But I don't know anything about Hyundai Scoops," I whispered back. "It could be the worst car being made for all I know. Why don't we call Greg or John (a friend of mine who knows just everything there is to know about cars) and see what they say?"

When I informed our friendly car dealer that we wanted to make a few phone calls, he made all kinds of interesting excuses why we couldn't and also quickly dropped the price another $1,000.

"Can we take it for a little test drive?" I asked.

"Sure," he said, tossing me the car keys. "I deal strictly in trust," he added, "and to prove it to you, I'm not even going to go with you."

So, Carrie and I drove straight to the nearest phone booth, where John tactfully told us that a Hyundai sure wouldn't be his first choice. My brother was even more to the point, saying, "Daryl, you'll be lucky if that piece of sh... doesn't break down before you get it back to the lot."

"Hey, look at this," said Carrie the next morning as we glanced through the Sunday newspaper car advertisements. "Isn't this the same exact car we were looking at last night?" she asked, pointing to one of a number of tiny color photos of vehicles in an ad.

"You mean that Hyundai Scoop I had all the way down to $10,000?" I asked.

"It is!" she exclaimed. "See, it's the same dealership, the same color, the same equipment, everything."

"Really?" I said. "What are they asking for it?"

"They want $8500 for it, Dad," she said, trying unsuccessfully not to laugh. "That's only $1,500 less than what you had that guy all the way down to last night."

'Glaucoma' spells trouble, but GSMS word whiz makes it to regional finals

Cody Coulombe, a seventh grader at Golden State Middle School, was part of a group of 56 students in the California Central Valley region to represent their schools in the recent regional finals of the National Spelling Bee held in Sacramento. The contest was sponsored by the Sacramento Bee and was conducted at the Scottish Rite Masonic Center, Wednesday, March 6.

Over 165,000 students were eligible to compete in the contest and those 56 students represented the finest spellers in Colusa, El Dorado, Nevada, Placer, Sacramento, Solano, Sutter, Yolo and Yuba counties. First, the student had to place first in their schools written test on January 25. Then the winners had to compete in another written test held at the Sacramento Bee on February 3.

CODY COULOMBE

According to the program coordinator, Molly Evangelisti, this was the toughest competition ever. In order to qualify for the finals, the students had to miss eight or fewer words on the written test held at the Sacramento Bee to make the cut.

As far as the teachers knew, Coulombe was the first student from Golden State Middle School to qualify for the regional finals. The school faculty was behind him all the way and even sent a six student support team to cheer him on. They were Byron Groesbeck, Steven Bennett, Sara Penrod, Robin Shofner, Mugeda Ferous and Andres Martinez.

Coulombe breezed through the first round correctly spelling the word "lunge." His word in the second round that was correctly spelled was "melancholy". The third round ended his quest as he misspelled the word "glaucoma."

Eventual winner, Dustin King, from California Middle School, won with the word "spinnaker." Some of the other words that he correctly spelled were "eczematous," "rhomboid" and "toxicosis." He will receive an all expense paid trip to the Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee May 27 through June 1, 1996 to be held in Washington, D.C. as the representative of the California Central Region.

Local demos take a stand

The West Sacramento Democratic Club, at its February meeting, voted to support Congress of California Seniors' and other consumer groups' initiative petition, now being circulated to be put on the November ballot, a "Retirement Savings and Consumer Protection Act." Pension funds have become vulnerable with such fiascos as the Orange County losses in the securities market. Further information can be secured from the Congress of California Seniors. The filing period for the petitions closes the first week in April. Elected officers for 1996 are Lisa Roberts, president; James Cahill, vice-president; Joyce Miller, recording secretary; Madeline Iorns, corresponding secretary; and Margaret Sturdevant, treasurer.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The Sacramento Kings (25-30) continue to have their problems winning and the injury list is growing. Kings newcomer Billy Owens strained his foot and is day-to-day, and Sarunas Marciulionis, who was placed back on the injured list, has a tear in his right quadriceps. Michael Smith re-sprained his right ankle, Richmond is feeling tired, Edney is nursing a sore knee and Olden Polynice has a bad back.

Other than that, the Kings are just fine!

They snapped their 11-game losing streak by beating the New York Knicks last week, but turned around and lost two more games in a row to the lowly Clippers and Bullets. Playoff hopes are still alive, but they need to put together some kind of winning streak to start feeling good about themselves.

The Kings face the Los Angeles Lakers on Thursday at the Arco, then travel to Portland on Friday.

Bad news for the 49ers when they missed out on the Giants' running back Rodney Hampton, who signed a six-year, $16.45 million contract with New York. Hampton is a transition player and the Giants can retain him by matching any offer within seven days.

The Niners also lost a chance at signing Pro Bowl defensive end Leslie O'Neil, who signed with the Rams. The good news is the Cowboys lost another starting defensive player when middle linebacker Robert Jones signed a five-year contract with the Rams. The Boys have lost four starting players to free agency from their Super Bowl defense!

The Niners are looking at running backs Barry Foster and Natron Means, who was released by San Diego in a salary-cap move.

The Giants and A's started Spring Training games on March 1 and both are 2-2 in exhibition games. The A's have a lot of holes and open spots on their team, while the Giants have their line-up set but have a big problem with starting pitching.

Undefeated Willie Jorrin (11-0, 7 KOs) headlines the Monday, March 18 boxing show at the Radisson Hotel in Sacramento. Jorrin steps up a notch to face a tough fighter from Mexico in Antonio Ramirez (17-6, 10 KOs). Jorrin has been promised a championship fight in May if he gets past Ramirez.

Tickets can be purchased at the Azteca Restaurant and are priced at $42, $32 and $22 or by calling me at 372-7332.

Partnership, high expectations are keys to education

A little follow-up on last week's school discussion in this space:

Several teachers have responded verbally (in addition to the letters below), and have offered some interesting comments.

One stressed the importance of putting an extra pair of hands into each classroom in the form of more teachers' aides, to help students one-on-one with problems while the teacher and the rest of the class move on with a lesson.

Another talked about how important it was to have high expectations of the children, both in terms of behavior and academic performance. They need to be aware of what the work they are expected to complete, and held accountable. They need to be given a lot of academic responsibilities, and they will rise to meet what is expected of them.

Sounds familiar; this was the theme of "Stand and Deliver," the movie about the inner-city mathematics overachievers starring Edward James Olmos as real-life teacher Jaime Escalante. The same theme has been the topic of countless other books and movies.

A teacher also talked about how important it was to form a partnership between the teacher, the student and the parents. A child's education works best when many people work together.

Whether anything concrete will come of this discussion in terms of new programs or solutions remains to be seen, but the discussion is enlightening.

Teacher's wish list

Re: Editorial, "Teachers: what do you need?"

Thanks so much for asking. This is a long-awaited opportunity to publish my personal "wish list." I feel confident that many of my fellow teachers will find that some of their needs are mentioned here as well.

Basic needs are:

1. Realistic goals and expectations about what can be accomplished, given today's large classes which include a wide variety of abilities and skill levels, often from diverse backgrounds and languages.

2. Teacher's aides to help children in learning one on one, or in small groups, when extra help is needed, and to assist the teacher with the overwhelming clerical responsibilities.

3. Smaller class sizes so it will be possible to become aware of, understand, and meet the needs of each child whose education is entrusted to us.

4. Children who are loved, respected, nurtured, well-nourished, rested, on time, and ready to learn.

5. Parents who trust and respect schools and teachers, whose priorities include supporting and helping their children.

6. Custodians who are allotted enough time to thoroughly clean the classrooms.

7. Helpful and congenial office staff to smooth the transition between home and school.

8. Prep time to keep current on the latest in teaching techniques and technologies and to plan enticing lessons which are responsive to the children's needs as outlined in the district curriculum guidelines.

7. Copy machines that work dependably, enough of them to serve the needs of each staff, and an adequate allowance of copies.

8. Respect and support from the community and administration as we strive to provide the best education for each child.

Some of these needs are being met while others are not. Also, some items require extra funding, but not all do. The teacher's aides, for example, could actually become a reality if members of the community volunteered to participate an hour or two each week in the classrooms. Possibly a community based volunteer group could be developed here, based on successful programs in near-by areas.

Turn off the TV!

Thank you for your insightful comments regarding the needs of Washington Unified School District classrooms. While it is easy to blame teachers or the School Board for the quality of education, it is, in fact, what students bring to the classroom which most significantly determines what they take away from the classroom.

Researchers set out to determine the single most important characteristic shared by recipients of National Merit Scholarships (high school graduates chosen for outstanding academic and extracurricular achievements). The most common attribute among these extraordinary students was that they sat down to dinner with their family on a regular basis -- without the T.V. on! Just to have dinner with no television -- nothing was a stronger indicator of academic achievement!

I invite families to participate in the second annual National TV Turn-Off Week, April 24 through 30. For more information, write to TV-Free America at 1322 18th Street, NW #300, Washington, D.C., 20036, or call (202) 887-0436.

Vote for school bond

Nothing could be more important to California's economic future than our schools and our students. On March 26, voters will have an opportunity to renew their commitment to education by voting in favor of Proposition 203, the school bond.

If approved Proposition 203 would provide $3 billion in bond funds to help upgrade schools, community colleges and public universities for new technologies, improve earthquake safety and lessen overcrowding. This statewide school bond is desperately needed! Every penny voters have previously authorized for school construction, seismic upgrades and technological improvements has already been spent or has been spoken for. There is no more money. Plus, Proposition 203 conforms to both the letter and the spirit of the state's spending limit laws without raising taxes. Because the Washington Unified School District Schools are all over thirty (30) years old, the District has over $12 million in facilities modernization and upgrade needs.

Clearly, as California's financial outlook continues to improve, schools and students must come first. The California Chamber of Commerce, League of Women Voters of California, California State PTA, California Building Industry Association, California Teachers Association and others all support Proposition 203. I urgently request that the voting citizens of the City of West Sacramento vote YES for schools, YES for students, and YES on Proposition 203,

Right on, Cheaper

At the March 7 meeting our Planning Commission unanimously urged City Council to reconsider and approve the building of a Cheaper! Food and Liquor store on Jefferson Blvd. in Southport. While one gentleman registered an emotional protest, fearing such a store would devalue his property -- and he moved there to get away from everyone else -- Mr. Vince Frugoli (who has lived in Southport longer than the younger fellow has been living) emphasized how ridiculous it is to continue to require Southporters to make those long trips for the slightest food and/or liquor need; i.e., Southporters need and deserve a Cheaper! store now. (Buy gas there, too!)

Although a study presented showed only a net decrease in traffic of just over one percent, it sure seems like many more people would stay in Southport

RC grads become U.S. Marines

Three River City High School graduates successfully completed basic training for the U.S. Marine Corps in San Diego last month.

Tony Cardoza (RCHS '93) joined Josh San Marco ('94) and Douglas Gongaware, Jr. ('94) in completing the training.

Following infantry training, San Marco and Gongaware will be heading to Quantico, Virginia, for training as military police, while Cardoza will head to Tennessee to train as a Marine Corps firefighter.

San Marco and Cardoza now hold the rank of private. Gongaware received a merit promotion to private, first class, while in basic training.

The three still have families in West Sacramento.

Sex is better than broccoli for sound mind and body

SEXUALITY

THE HEALING POWER OF SEX
Judith Sachs
Prentice Hall. 310 pages.
Some people might think the rather graphic illustrations are the best part of this modern sex handbook. The most important part, though is the message: a well-rounded sex life is good for mind, body, soul and relationships. Sachs gives tips on how to spice up a flagging marriage and how to teach kids to have a healthy attitude about sex.

EDUCATION

THE END OF EDUCATION
Neil Postman.
Knopf. 209 pages.
School used to be a place where kids learned family honor, restraint, social responsibility, humility and empathy, says the author. Now they're taught economic utility (how to hold a job), consumership, technology and separatism. Postman suggests a variety of ways that modern education can back on track, none of which are likely to be taken too seriously by educators.

than would go there to the Cheaper! store; hence, a more significant decrease in Jefferson Blvd. should result. Knowing such a store to be there (Jefferson Blvd. and Linden Road, southwest corner), the traffic factors should be less a barrier to projects to those like the two on the drawing board for the area just south of the Barge Canal.

Last year we had a major vehicle accident that blocked that little bridge for the better part of the daylight hours. That caused quite a panic, aside from the tragedies from the wreck itself. Suddenly more groceries and liquor (many more!) were in demand than were in supply. If the Cheaper! store had been there, they would have responded to an increased need by probably delivering a few truckloads extra via that little bridge further south, thus saving the majority of Southporters the panic and many would be spared the longer trips.

Remember, too, YoloBus recently reduced their #39 midday runs from eight to four, from about 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Cheaper! store should have a $.5 copy machine as do other local liquor-selling stores, another convenience Southporters deserve, and I mentioned this March 7 and earlier to Cheaper! management.

So while many folks in Southport may have opposed the Cheaper! store because of "the personality of the ownership" or the fact that it will sell liquor seems outweighed by conveniences offered. Liquor would still be bought elsewhere by Southporters.

Library supporters dine & donate

At the 34th annual dinner of the East Yolo Friends of the Library, the 1995 Friend of the Year award was present to Jay Johnstone. Now working as head of the Davis branch, Johnstone had been in charge of the West Sacramento and Clarksburg branches, and was instrumental in numerous advances in service during the past six years.

Tom Hannigan, Assemblyman for this district, was honored with a Life Membership in the Friends of the Library in recognition of his long-time support of public libraries. An over-sized check for $8,470 from the friends was presented to Cathy Lorda of the Turner Branch. This is the monetary support that the Friends are providing this year to support various library programs.

at River City), the Raiders hit the highway to take on Galt on Thursday and Calaveras on Friday. Like Dixon and Argonaut before them, the Warriors and the Redskins fell victim to the more experienced Raiders, who are now 4-0 this season.

In Galt, the girls side of the team, led by 6-0, 6-0 victories from #2 singles player Khonthavy Phouanglasy and the doubles team of Meuy Saechao and Bethany Monroe, dominated their opponents. Amazingly, Phouanglasy did not allow her opponent a single point in the entire first set, and only two in the match, breaking a pair of all-time school records in the process. #1 Mirthala Santizo struggled a bit in the second set but finished strong for a 6-1, 6-3 win, the Douangchanh Lattasima, paired with Jeff Wright in mixed doubles, completed the girls' sweep with a 6-0, 6-1 triumph.

In boys singles, #2 Bounthay Bouttavong won easily 6-1, 6-2 while #1 Peter Santizo battled his way into a third set tiebreaker before falling 4-6, 6-3, 6-7 (5-7). Ty Fisher and Ahmad Fazel completed the overall 6-1 team victory with a 6-0, 6-4 win in boys doubles.

After dispatching the Capital Valley Conference's Warriors, River City journeyed to San Andreas to take on Calaveras of the Mother Lode League. As he had done the previous week against Argonaut, Raider Coach Dave Brooks juggled his lineup to fit the MLL's 5-match format and the result was a 5-0 victory, the first shutout of the year.

Making his varsity singles debut, Fazel won in the 8-game pro set format 8-2. In girls singles, Mirthala Santizo improved her season record to 4-0 with an 8-5 win. The match was even at five games-all before Santizo closed out by winning the last three. Bouttavong and Peter Santizo won in boys doubles 8-3, Saechao and Monroe earned their third "bagel" of the week with an 8-0 win, and Phouanglasy, paired with Fisher in mixed doubles, ended her incredible two-day performance with another 8-0 set. The duo, who last year advanced to the Section Tournament in mixed doubles, allowed only one point in the match.

"My only disappointment with the preseason has been the rain," Brooks confessed. "It forced the postponement of the Amador match (to March 27th at R.C.) which would have been a real strong test for us, especially on the girls side. Other than that, we're 4 and 0 as a team, 21-3 in individual matches, I've got no complaints."

By far the Raiders toughest match to date will be this week at Bear River to open Golden Empire League Play. Last year, the Bruins were undefeated league champions, their narrowest victory a 5-2 win against R.C. Home matches this week are against Highlands today in a non-league match and tomorrow's GEL opener versus Lindhurst. Match time is 3 p.m.

A 35-year old male Todhunter resident came to the police department and said over the telephone "hot line" that he had come to deliver an "ancient Coke bottle" to the captain as a gift. He said he was not on drugs. He left the bottle with a note for the police captain.

March 2, 9:38 p.m.

A Hobson Ave. woman reported that her son had been playing with an old pair of handcuffs and had managed to get them locked around his ankle. They did not have a key, and she requested police help.

March 2, 4:23 p.m.

March 2, 8:47 p.m.

A woman said her son's girlfriend had come to their 11th St. house around 6:30 p.m. and been confronted outside by a man covering his face with a black cloth. The girlfriend left, returned later, and was met by the same man, who pointed a gun at her. She left again.

ferent projects plan improvements to the troubled Jefferson Blvd. corridor, including road-widening and additional traffic lights in various places. Bayside's Gainsborough development will probably have to provide a light at South Linden and widen Marshall Rd., he said.

Patek anticipated going ahead with the bidding and construction work for the planned new bridge, partly to avoid losing several hundred thousand dollars in state funding and to avoid having to re-do an air quality study if construction deadlines are missed. There remains no "drop-dead" date for using $8.8 million in federal money to help with the project, he added.

Later this month, West Sacramento will learn whether CalTrans will help fund a major overhaul and expansion of the Jefferson bridge and its corridor from the freeway into Southport.
